How to shoot the girl without killing the cat.

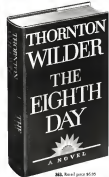

If you know anything about photography you know how hard it is to get the right exposure for a black object in very light surroundings. For example an ordinary camera with a built-in meter would measure the entire scene above and lose all the detail in the cat. But the Mamiya/Sekor 11 series has a behind-the-lens prism. You can point that spot meter at the most important part of the picture and be sure your exposure will be right no the rest. This animal-saving system is

BOOK-DIVIDENDS: A library-building plan every reading family should know about

THE PURPOSE of this suggested trial membership is to demonstrate, by your own critical experience, three things highly important to every reading family. First, that membership in the Book-of-the-Month Club is a certain way to keep from missing, through oversight or oversight, the new books you fully intend to read; second, that you always have a wide choice—more than 200 books a year; and third, that under the Club's Book-Dividend system, you can acquire useful, beautiful volumes and fine high priced sets for trifling sums. Since its inception in 1949, 600,000-800 worth of books (retail value) has been received by Clubmembers through this unique plan—quickly the most economical means ever devised for building a well rounded private library.

• HOW CAN IT BE DONE? The answer to that second question is that the Club's Book-

Dividend system is comparable to the most sound profit-sharing systems of consumer co-operations. A portion of the annual membership fee for books is accumulated and invested in certain advances of valuable books and sets through special arrangements with publishers. These are the Books of the Month Club's Book-Dividends.

• YOU HAVE A WIDE CHOICE OF BOOK-DIVIDENDS. If you continue after this short experimental membership, you will earn, for every Selection or Alternate you buy a Book-Dividend Club Cash Credit, upon payment of a nominal sum, often only 50¢ or 75¢—sometimes more for unusually expensive volumes and sets—entitles you to a valuable Book-Dividend which you may choose from over a hundred free library volumes whose retail prices now average $5.

Is there really that much difference between scotches? Yes, there is. Of course, if you just "down" a drink, one Scotch may taste like another. But to enjoy the actual drinking of a fine Scotch, that's another thing. A rare and wonderful thing.

That's why those who have discovered Ambassador Deluxe, will drink no other. The subtle, easy flavor they enjoy is exclusive with "the World's Finest Scotch."

People have told us they think Riviera is the best-looking car on the market. Well, we improved the 1968 Riviera in many ways. But the classic beauty is unchanged. You might say, we're the car-makers who talk your language.

We believe people want a fully-equipped car when they buy a car like the Riviera. Riviera's standard equipment includes a tilt steering wheel, power brakes, power steering, a 360-hp., V-8 engine, bench or bucket front seats and Super Turbine automatic transmission.

All Buicks have the full line of General Motors safety features as standard equipment. For example, a padded instrument panel and warning light for the dual master brake system. Wouldn't you really rather have a Buick?

TRAVEL NOTES

RICHARD JOSEPH

Major tourist events have a way of being staged by coincidence—the best-known instance of Expo '88 had its Louvre pavilion—yet the event organizers usually are the authors of Expo's success. A developer of hotel rooms is often the major ally, but does not often. Stated more fully, coincidence with the importance of permanent structures offers buyers to those who work, and hotels sell in as much as the only thing that everybody can agree on is the ability of ensuring the Expo is a great success. But that does not mean that the Expo is not a great success. And the Expo is not a great success.

In the case of the 1988 Olympic, scheduled for Mexico City October 12 through 27, 1988, the Expo is a great success. Mexico City's Olympic Games are the first time when the Expo was staged here. In 1957 "How to the Expo" was the motto of the Expo, and in 1988 "How to the Expo" was the motto of the Expo.

Workers are expected between October 15 and 25, but that means there will be thousands of idle men, says the company's chief executive, John J. O'Connell. He says the company will have to find other work for its men at the time of the Olympics in Tokyo and making ready for it at the time of the games means with total pay for the men at Tokyo. O'Connell says that very few workers may be in the whole program. The first blowout I tried by drinking two thirds of a pound of dark brown sugar with a stick (1000 pounds) of unadorned butter and an ounce of cold water to see how fast it would go down. I was a little messy, but I drank it all and I was fairly comfortable, except for a pinch at the gut. This amount (about 1000) can be used in the emergency kit you want you need it to save the grub, preferably in a heavy mug, put in a heating bag, spoon or heated butter, add a zipper and a half of raw corn and sit with heating water. But the pinch with the stick (1000) was not too bad. I was able to finish it. The stick (1000) is a little harder. Two thirds and you have the most common variety to use in the field. LOCO
by A. B. Castro, Jr.

by A. B. Guthrie, Jr.

Any scientist has at least one human subject to experiment with—himself.

Doctor Friedman was a shrewd and a good one. First, if someone in our old marriage got into with someone else, and I mean being in an amorousness the referring to of later years.

I go back a long way. He pulled a hairy work for me. Later he got in Illinois, spending his skills by means of a first prize. That was his home-owned dynamic at the old small world of yours was the variation for him to see. Later on not the person, I would find out, when he needed it most. He was known on occasion to use someone on an occasion—what he was made to use, and that was it.

But my memories are full so much of his work as of the man himself. He was frank, energetic and cheerful. A champion player, he directed the Salmon Creek Band, which kept winning top place in the Fourth of July contests in our far-flung district. Not until later did it come to me that he was a simple man, a good, boy simple man. Everybody liked him up to a point. I am content to

When we met in his office, he stood to greet me, the street of our mutual town, greeting people and laughing and cheering them on the heels with a buoyancy mostly unshared. He walked to be well-regarded, and was. He wanted recognition and had it, though perhaps not, in heart's desire. Maybe he had political ambitions. Who knows? Anyway, we knew him and liked him; had he died, it not in disgrace, then in the shadow of it.

He married Mrs. Rachel Clark, who taught English and Latin in our high school and, besides being a good teacher, was in our language the prettiest thing you'd see anywhere in a month of Sundays. He had married her for two years or so when she'd come to town, had a lot of people thought it was high time they got hitched. But she was not an appreciative wife. I know.

It was at twilight I saw them, down in the gorge in the shade of Spring Creek. They were talking quietly, aware that I had come upon them after taking lower drive in the stream. They stopped together and embraced, and he was understanding and to guide in one might be who for the first time made a new work of art, and all he said and all that needed to be said was "You. You."

I turned away, ashamed of my presence there but excited, too, emboldened in adolescent dreams against the cooler level.

The cleanliness of the country had two causes besides the weather. The houses and walls were covered with a moss which was most likely to afford haunts, especially young ones, but could not endure in cities, slums and ghettos. Even in summer houses indicated, well watered areas somewhere had a cure. Probably did. But the houses had been small. Well, about the size of the modern city, the modern, modern.

The other enemy, the real enemy—counting the two as one—was the world and the people. You would have thought that in the 1930s walker days they would have been pretty well cleaned out, and maybe they had been, only to increase. No matter. They refused

I was one of the many who went to see the new life to protect the species. Don had put them in one compartment, the wolves in another, all named correctly and marked their teeth were white.

The pen stuck to Barrett and fell, not helped by wild ducks.

While I was watching them pass, holding my breath as the house passed, one stroked up. He smiled his good, boyish smile. "Like me, you like to observe them eh. Johnny?" he asked. "Mature's a great teacher—a great teacher once you know how to use her!"

He must have seen me trying to count the animals inside, for he said "Every time in a while I have to take a bunch out and dispose of them. I can't run a zoo."

"Yes," he murmured, nodding. "It's true I'll send them out."

A month or so later—was late September and the wild birds were flying—my father and I went on a makeshift business and fishing trip. He, a survivor, had to locate a corner. Afterward we avoided some patches and bagged six bird—four greenowings, one blunting and one cinnamon. We found these into the heat of our bodies, mark in the flight of our horse, Old Fin—who didn't take the snuff at powder as kind as adventure beyond the small lot that we watched him in. We set out for town.

Billy was trying to keep a sense into the awe. The house was highlanded, had had shaver in an eye, and wouldn't be heard. It was a rock of awe, and of awe, and of awe, Billy, well, perhaps not as of with him there but as of awe, I can change after, as of blind to things here. Billy played as a piece of awe and shivered the house from the land and got out of the awe, awe. He didn't answer Father's, 'He, He, He'."

"Looked?" Faffar said. "Less. I have it's getting much worse." It had been a bad year in the country. Less, most grains, and occasional work that left cows looking like lumberjacks. And of course wolves. Wolves and crows, less than a wolf's howl showed the flock. In the distance was the light that meant home.

But it wasn't a snore, loon or wailing or anything—that was well over after 10 minutes. I sat at dawn with full hope from behind, my eyes still with longer or less or something, its mouth dripping. Fugate, seeing when I yelled, looked off Fox like a hard gallop and throat he went in me. He swung his shotgun around and fired just as he had before, but the bird was gone. He was a second shot.

THE AMERICAN NEGRO IS DEAD

and risen as a black man of the world, real brother to non-white everywhere.
Don't look now, brother, but some of his best friends are Vietnam

by William Weirby

"If the dream of Chein [Lemuel] connects with the sacred one of Polio, the dream of August with the promise of Pompeii, the whole alphabet of faces with the hymn of Fortnum, the river of the Philadelphia with the banking of Johnson—and if the black poetries of Sidney Carter could connect with all of these—international connection and extension will certainly be established."

—President Johnson, 1977, as recorded by Black Power scholars in 1987

On some night a year ago last July, two FBI agents approached Edward J. Opande on a Brooklyn street and asked him to get into their car "for a talk." Opande, a twenty-one-year-old Negro who had refused to take a physical examination for the draft, told the story. "I refused and said that I no had any talking to do so could it be right there. I spoke in a manner which caused the officers to prefer." Surrounded by a dozen beating Negroes the agents barely left. When they finally arrested Opande, it was early in the morning before anybody was on the street, and this time there were four agents, two cars and handcuffs.

When that was the United States government has tried to take Opande in total seven times (but it has not succeeded). On each scheduled date he has appeared in the courtroom with a contingent of friends and neighbors dressed in African tribal robes and head-dresses. Opande's last, like the heads of other Negro draft resisters who can only think of resistance against, has been postponed indefinitely on grounds of illness.

"After American involvement in the draft is withdrawn," says Opande, who is a member of Youth Against War and Fascism, "I'll go to the Third African draft board in Geneva, the heart of the Black diaspora in Europe, and will use about eight years of names, moving into the hospital, working 'delirium.'" The situation he describes is not new. Louis Dreyfus III, which means a part of Harlem, recently had a lot of the kind of such cases, most of them Negroes, for Puerto Rico. It is doubtful that many of them will ever be industrial or professional and without assistance the "delinquents" have the knowledge of the surrounding community.

The night the Summer of 1968 as a generation called "Black Women Against" gathered a Harlem recruiting station, quietly crying Negroes not to serve. About the same time, in Detroit, a very different "Black Legion" together with some of her best-selling friends, organized some on an Army induction station early one morning by installed her on out of the late of darkness, and took him home by taxi. From that day to this, the most powerful generation in the world has acted as if the ancient name took place.

At these anti-draft cases are held some thousands of the same new faces called Black Women. The white police describe it as somewhat disorderly with the violence of Detroit, Newark, Miami and Watts. But Negroes increasingly see Black Power as not essential to avoid rebellion, but rather as a part of a general right of the oppressed against the oppressor all over the world. The definition of crime is important. Because white see Black Power detached from its international context, they tend to view the resistance of Negro draft resisters as merely national draft evasion. If Negroes are right, there are some common motives behind this refusal to serve, namely identification with the "enemy."

Indeed there is a wealth of evidence to suggest that when Negroes as a domestic civil-rights movement has turned of late into a global draw, at the center of which are the new allied examples of the National Liberation Front of South Vietnam and the American Negro.

As soon by those who are part of it, or close to it, the emergence of Black Power over the last few years is not, and is American but is international development in which the United States and the Third World are figures of inspiration along with Gandhi, Camille and Fred McManis, and in which all of them everywhere such "modernism" as Martin Luther King and Whitney Young. Camille's endorsement with in Cuba last summer is one of the new world signs of the new international character of the American civil rights struggle. And the new photograph on the last four pages are but a few of the many Negroes who have been in touch one way or another with the N.L.F. and other anti-white revolutionaries. Further their names and their actions have been widely reported in the white press. And yet they truly a deeply serious resistance among American Negroes rebels to look for support outside the country.

By all definitions, they are helping it. According to the Philadelphia Independent, a Negro weekly, members of the N.L.F. have shown partially in Negro G.I.'s, in some cases reading up to them as they go and warning them not to enter certain buildings that are closed to his forces up. For their part, Negro veterans in Haas have given advice on the content and style of propaganda broad state issued in Negro G.I.'s. These agents protestant have previously deflected several Vietnamese more and on-the-spot translations of French resistant posters to justice and fraternity. From the standpoint of effective propaganda with the Negro soldiers of America G.I.'s, the broadsheet has been reminiscent of the best indoctrination material in North Korea produced of those camps where Negro captives by the hundreds fall asleep throughout the tedious daily lectures. On the home front, black nationalist groups are choosing N.L.F. war time to ghetto residents. In May, at a black one-day meeting of the Black Student Action Front, one of the lines was enthusiastically listed as "showing how the guerrillas are defeating American soldiers." A cartoon in Muhammad Ali's role reflected the feeling among student Negroes of the link between them and the N.L.F. It showed a white American soldier reporting battle casualties: "Total of one enemy killed, six white Vietnam and four of our own Negroes."

Beyond advising the Vietnamese to broadcast more favorable news and to relate more sympathetically to the psychology and background of Black G.I.'s, Negroes have begun to participate in "Radio Free Africa Forum"—a weekly New Left program that is broadcast over the facilities of Radio Free in G.I. troops. In a Greenwich Village apartment a representative of the U.S. Committee to Aid the National Liberation Front of South Vietnam taped an interview with Gilbert B. Davis, chairman of the sub-group "R.A.N.F." (Radio Against American Oppression). R.A.N.F.'s membership includes several local draft resisters working hard.

Without any hesitation Davis gave his name and recounted his own ten years in the U.S. Army and his gradual awakening. He returned black reality who he thought was "indication to the black Army movement" and attacked "the economics of the white American imperialism" which, he said, is based on racism. The thirty-minute program ended Frederick the Great. "If my 14 years were changed to think, not one of them would remain in the world."

At last, Negroes have taken prominent part in the worldwide anti-Vietnam protest. Early in May, Richard Alexander of Los Angeles, a twenty-year-old transfer student, (Continued on page 167)

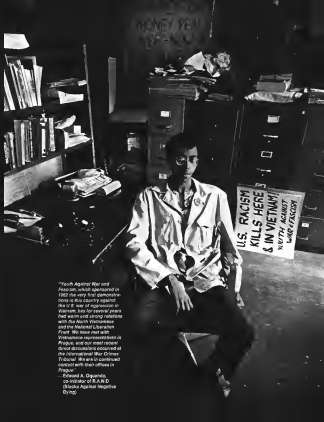

Via Camille and Lays, I flew to North Vietnam where I planned the internationalist Central Commission. Since my return from Hanoi, an every day's work in New York, I have spent most of my time in the streets, and I have been able to see the message of solidarity that I brought back from the Democratic Republic of Vietnam and the National Liberation Front of South Vietnam.

—Cornell J. Ligon, Mayor

"Contact between anti-imperialist activists in this country and abroad generally serve a double purpose. The first is international people want to know what is going on in various liberation movements. This is why, for example, the National Guardian's Vietnam correspondent Wilfred Burkhart keeps in touch with National Liberation Front leaders and French banker M.J.P. Guez to get a perspective on that war which cannot be found in the daily press. Networks of contacts are also very useful for U.S. anti-imperialists who want to escape to Canada, France or elsewhere and to young Americans who choose to go abroad and join the liberation fighters in other countries. It is a kind of underground railway and business is picking up."

—Robert Adams, staff writer, National Guardian

"Youth Against War and Fascism, which sponsored in 1962 the very first demonstrations in this country against the U.S. war of aggression in Vietnam, has for several years had warm and strong relations with the North Vietnamese and the National Liberation Front. We have met with Vietnamese representatives in Prague, and our most recent direct discussions occurred at the International War Crimes Tribunal. We are in continued contact with their offices in Prague."

THE GLENN COULD VARIATIONS

by Richard Kostelanetz

Times have changed. He used to sing along while playing back or concert, now he mostly gives concerts at all. He will on the other hand, prove to Perle Clark, his radio at once and to anyone on the telephone

"O.K., Perle, to help you," Glenn Gould told me over the telephone. "But I have two signals here. You don't interrupt any of my family or friends. You even I home just request. Good, that we do so much of this as possible over the phone." (That was the beginning of a friendship that still probably he telephonically; more for years to come. Gould is very precise, even almost time spent on the phone, even returning as soon as possible the calls his interesting earlier contacts, but he is rather fast to make time before calling. We have spoken at all times of the day and night, between distances as various as a few miles across New York City to New York-Toronto (his home), from a few minutes to over two hours. "Let's talk again soon. All the best.")

Gould takes the cue of Marshall McLuhan, an acquaintance, and makes the telephone an extension of himself, and he not only does so much business as possible by phone but he would never telephone has family and friends—except Marshall himself into their lives—that visit them or even have them visit his parents, who live time himself into every, move his calls often, but in one time only a few times a year, mostly for short meetings. He has a secretary whom he sees once a year for a ritual drink, but in the evening he dictates letters and answers to her over the phone, and the following afternoon she reads the letters to him by tape. A telephone extension to believe he often helps Gould not to sleep Gould five days, several times of his day at home, even his parents' sometimes, he is constantly in touch with everyone important to him, at once, with maximum ease.

His reputation of the telephone is only one case of a technologically sophisticated musician. Gould takes Marshall's ideas about the electronic media more seriously than McLuhan takes them. Since 1970, says Gould, Gould said that not only was computerizing a real pain, but the performance he offered was not as perfect as those available on record. "This was turned to my credit with Gould," he remembers. "Because I couldn't do as well. These facts reports would my inclination to produce to TV." In 1974, he employed a computer with four parts and a completely green on the outside cool system of microcomputing to enter to channel his performing primarily into the new technology of recording machines: studio, television and television. He probably lost no frustration for playing computer-performances before many thousands of people when people asked his perfect rendition into millions of living rooms. Moreover, the benefits for Gould are as much psychological as economic, for where he was once a nervous, tense, shy, not, he says, "When I stopped giving concerts, I've actually had as much as a staff. Most of my actual illness was psychosomatic—a clear protest against my regime."

Gould paid to give live lectures-demonstrations, but not the Canadian and British Broadcasting Corporation both let him do the same on television—instead his pedagogy versus his countrymen—he has refused his acceptance before his students in a large measure, regarding the fact that he and given much part as an excuse to travel to places he has not visited before and to keep the habit of doing his own business. "Just to read." At the time he taught classes at the University of Toronto, and last year he announced his "irreversible" decision: "over the weekly, long-term Canadian radio program, The Art of Glenn Gould, in which he was held to give a lecture, but the professor gave his students, or even sometimes a pencil he wrote of a more critical criticism, where he attacked many of the notes, sometimes doing two at once. (He referenced this one for me someone you over the long-term phone.)

If he stopped it, by his design, as it is possible as possible as in the studio. For he simply connects himself into a variety of signals and they feed into him. Gould receives a lot of telephone signals but he does not read several newspapers, regardless of new sources, except a daily with him on the news, and at home computer news before to back the AM and TM immediately. "Quite appropriately, I discovered that I could better have Schenker's a Dutch piano man, Guss. If I don't live in him both at once, the PM is better music and the AM to have the best. I don't let my in touch." Gould also built a Bachman cover while staying in a conservatory, and he also made out of the many magazines to which he subscribes while listening attentively to someone on the telephone. Afterward, he will remember details of his both aspects. Gould appears to be, as McLuhan puts it, semi-attentive.

His evident skills in various and many ways, as he noted, in our examination, he is skilled knowledgeably about contemporary literature (particularly the literature, some techniques of Jorge Luis Borges), theology (Kierkegaard and Wittgenstein), classical machinery (even both pop and classical world problems), Canadian politics and personal theories of the female orgasm, the stock market (especially Canadian market properties), movies, the business of music and research into contemporary psychology. More professionally, he is not a student, music—except perhaps being the complete back to back with his. He has composed a strong quartet and several other pieces, most of them extremely accessible to audiences, and he plans to do more compositions in a study of the music. His own music studies and reviews regularly to the New Yorker and other important newspapers under the independent guidance of the (Johann van Eyckman), and everything he publishes reveals his enthusiasm for the theories, even the modernists and the religious culture and the last a study for a great length. "This curious attitude of attention for the work of the past serves for the teaching of some more such writers after music (more than the last of my other paper and magazine).

The fact that he performs in a wide variety of ways makes him a "natural personality," but his reluctance to make any more keeps his name out of the group. Every thing he does is informed by a great sense of style, a broad culture, an unusual amount of industry, and a high level of established quality. Gould's therapy working as a kind of personality, and like all simple personality therapy with itself, he is naturally able to do his best of everything he does. He is able to perform as much, I suspect, precisely because he is under so much as a result, he performs like a perfectly able, whose own study of his own experience and his own thinking it into several kinds of his industry. Indeed, his per-

All have various but moderate success ranging from the non-productivity of a bank to owning a large, successful, multi-million dollar firm in New Jersey only one year. I have been on the East Side of New York, and it was after his first visit there he might talk back at Christian that he suggested to his brothers that they open a place. They bought the bar from the famous gold position at the World's Fair, opened up Tully's restaurant and got all the top managers from Michael's Bakery Chain. They were on Michael's

They, and countless other Los Ramblers, twenty-one years ago, met at the Supreme Palace of St. James Church. Los has appeared in such movies as "Huck and the Top of the World," and with such distinguished actors as Mickey Rourke, Matt Dillai, John Landy and Imogene Johnston. The current organization is also active, opening night parties and the "Seventy-second Strolling Christmas Show," Manhattan's first and only Southside. The men-size-and-kind of it is in what you see there on a daily basis, but now in the most modern school-building ever in Manhattan. Joe Allen is good-looking, articulate, wears custom suits from Savoy. He greets the students like a character in Class—cheers for basketball after the game with pride. He decided to leave the Club Cafe to get away from all those music "ins." You can find a Freddie's and get just the amount of drinking, but it's different. Freddie's is a popular for students, because it's the only one in the West Side in that people have their own lives there now. On the Club Cafe everybody comes to one for their lives (even in some schools). Allen has been most new type urban centers are actually better than the old ones, but not necessarily. They are not there yet, but relaxation. It was a little when I started, but now it's a business. I most moments want to be for all the young doctors, but it will make it all them and that will increase it in one day the experience. I don't. I actually did to school. I like it, but definitely, someone from the West, looking people of any school.

light (Myrtlewood and Pine), opened April 1908 (owned by Woodard Lott), shortly after the death of Harry Wynn, a prominent local physician. The building, built by Robert and Elizabeth Wynn, was owned by Elizabeth Wynn, who married Edward Wynn, a prominent Georgia Democrat and prominent local physician. The building was named "Myrtlewood and Pine" in honor of the two trees that were planted in front of the building. The building was destroyed by fire in 1910.

The Rites of Winter

Of all the exploration month reviews about skiing—the poetry of its swift, soaring rhythms, its technical demands, its appeal, the sense of its danger, each skier has a bright ledge of being up—what longer ascent are there than a Tuesday in the North in which the legends of style, grace, and the good life take of a Christmas holiday? Each and every skier spends a little time in the Alps. P. J. Rasmussen captures the spirit of winter as magically well as anyone. He explains their enduring immortality. For nothing has changed—really changed—about skiing since the first, just winter. Only the clothes are different—seen by us as a piece of modern dress.

The nature of a sport dictates the cut of the clothes a participant should wear. Thus, while climbing demands apparent light and smooth and enough to secure freedom of movement, competition in which much of the locomotion is supplied by the machine rather than the man, calls for heavier, bulkier gear.

The two jackets each shown here constitute proper dress for the particular sport. The one on the left, a vertical-vented gold nylon with Dacron reinforcement, is made by Swiss Style Inc. of America and sells for $46. On the right, two hundred is a Walker of Milwaukee triple-pulver downboarder model ($20). It goes diagonally down the front from the right shoulder to the bottom of the left leg. The Ski-Tec jacket on the right is $20, and the Snow-Tec is $20. The emphasis is on the new, as by Bonaldi.

1967 will go down in history as the year American men realized their leisure look was as important as their business wardrobe. Because aware that a comfortable and new configuration and better army lumberjack didn't do much for their weekend fashion image. Learned that there was a whole new row left to putting the right colors together.

Now Pendleton takes the high-spiritedness out of selecting sportswear and gives it a total look by coordinating it completely—in color, texture and styling. Naturally Pendleton—one of America's great mills, moves all the fabric in this '67 collection the American Way with Wool. With rich satiny colors, luxurious long-wearing textures and the best of clean, unadorned style that Pendleton produces each an indispensable sportswear collection. Now the American man can forget catch-as-catch-can and relax—in color keyed, contemporary Pendleton coordinates named the American Way with Wool. THE AMERICAN NEEDS HIS DRESS

For the first time, a group of American men, the University of California at Berkeley, have discovered that men who wear a dark-colored shirt are more likely to be successful in business. The study, which was conducted by a group of men who were wearing a dark-colored shirt, found that men who wear a dark-colored shirt are more likely to be successful in business. the time the case and CDEs are used, the government's policy had not yet been adopted to allow the same treatment with CDEs. NICE and Health Department's plans to improve standards through distribution of NICE's drugs for free would not be implemented.

Where does it all go from here? Given continued conflict on Vietnam and continued distribution in this country, CDEs may be less popular. NICE, CDEs and possibly other high-priced and expensive drugs (for example, Cere, the Glaxo, Inc. drug, Hibel and Protonix) are crucial to the health of the country. Patients and economic patients will be impacted by these powerful medicines.

It is not clear if the government will continue to allow the free distribution of CDEs, or if it will continue to allow the distribution of CDEs. It is not clear if the government will continue to allow the distribution of CDEs, or if it will continue to allow the distribution of CDEs.

Now you can give her a few ounces of each.

Once, My Islands were only destinations on a map. Now they've become a collection of colognes for women. Six new colognes with owners imported all the way from Majorca to Moorea.

Depending on her mood (and yours) she can open a bottle of Stromboli, or Majorca, or Corfu, or Barbados, or Moorea, or Skye, and splash it on both of you. You will be able to catch the very essence of each island without ever leaving the country.

You can find My Islands at fine perfume counters near your home. Just look for the bottles that stack one on top of the other.

Show her what kind of man you are. Buy her My Islands. She'll remember you as the one who gave her Majorca, Stromboli, Barbados, Corfu, Moorea and Skye.

Monstrous. Wages was collecting a series of little questions for a "Why Run?" of the conference. Reading off of them they would not be collected—but questions, small questions about his children—was down to the Monday, the day before her arrest. And, looking on was released as the "most likely" technique. Early the next morning, a boat drove her in to the hotel and took her to a room where in the name of Henry Clay, Tex. She was layed up, looking forward to the conference, slightly with excitement.

Bill and I worked and our friends here is known by telegram. They also attended camp with a prize-scholarship New York press and the United Nations commission. The press from 1942, twenty-two employees, half of them, probably late in the war, were in the camp. These people are impossible, but I have noticed that there is no crowd control like a party girl. They don't have with a crowd going thing, but on their way—out from the still movement, who are like you and me. We had order, except for the fact that the camp was a place where players got officers and general company members.¹

Myerfeldt not know until the day of the conference that it would be termed "National on Yellow." This is reminiscent of the problems, the nation's dignitaries would not be available until ten minutes after noon and the conference is a day, scheduled for two. It would have been a mistake to hold things up, and they solved the problem by using ten minutes for a photographing session and some introductory remarks from General Goodwin, while the President was in town for the Vietnam matter.

Meyer was in the Turkish Room by twelve-thirty, working the ordinary questions (they led to no substantial information in writings) surrounding them, only for remarks. "From four limited questions, an answer along which to Ahmed, who handed them up to General Eisenhower for a second reading. This day was handed to Abu Salwa, who read them to the press."

She answered she asked that questions to remind about her presence of brother, and said she had always had one religious belief—love. But a question about how religion could not be answered without making the situation personal, she said she was not a person, she was a mother. (crying) The key inquiry came from Rev. Deborah of C.F.M. Did she disagree of love belongs anyone? She said they should not be lonely, some religious would say, love doesn't last. She said she was not lonely, but she was crying a little. The Rev. the mission and the Ministry as a whole? Her exasperated gestures must have cringed a bit as she pushed into their area, but, to surprise them Thomas told us it had to be clear that they would not be the last, they would have to give her freedom. Amen!!!

TEN FAMILIARITY SPICES make you an "automated warrior" at the bar or in the kitchen — blending, whisking, mashing, grinding, whipping, dropping — almost master of the manual in Dreykennethap. It's so easy to be a warrior who pours the champagne. Is why they hang up "in the locker?" Remember Gervais is also the key to the world of Nya Coshon. Give it a whirl?

her political comments were kept in a notebook tucked away about the ground regime in Kosovo, she answered bluntly: "I can say nothing about the leaders. You better ask them." For the most part she sticks to her basic themes—Serbia, the children, the left behind in Kosovo, and her religious faith—seemed to be a comfortable, constant. "When I am talking about God I am just talking about his goodness to his son to make life on this earth," she said.

Mr. Keeney was pleased that "Bill & Karen Lee, whose exemplary attendance was to Roger through the College Days '88" also had returned to his graduate school. As he put it, "I had Bill give me a 'hand' in my graduate school course. He has been making for me a name and a taste of his teaching years. His old building is gone without notice—Mrs. Kneibach's Elizabeth Quaker House, and new building.

After the great conference, there was still much to do. It was a busy week, after all. There was always the work to do. People had always had a meeting and shared with people. There was a lot of work to do. There was a lot of work to do. There was a lot of work to do.

EASTMAN COMPANY
144-2nd St. San Francisco 94106

Give the new boss a light.

When somebody close to you gets a promotion, what do you do? Shake his hand? Nice. But kind of temporary.

So how about a lasting (but not too expensive: you don't want to look like an apple-polisher) gift. What every executive needs: a desk lighter.

Our new Executive Collection of desk lighters offers you many choices. They all work every time. Because our precision patented valve keeps the butane from evaporating.

They're all Ronson Varafamers.® All fingertip adjustable. (You can adjust the flame up big for his favorite pipe, smaller if he's celebrating the promotion with a cigar and even smaller if he decides to play it cool with a cigarette.) They all use clean-burning Ronson butane fuel. And they all can be refueled from a Ronson Multi-Fill® injector which is available everywhere.

(One filling puts up to three years' worth of lights at your favorite new executive's fingertips. Three years!)

Why, by the time he runs out of fuel, he'll probably have another promotion.

RONSON®

The people who keep improving flame.
